

One Region, Working Together for Success

Middletown is located in the heart of Southwest Ohio, an economic engine for the Midwest and the nation. Home to 10 Fortune 500 companies, our communities are growing into one, collective “metroplex”—bringing our diverse advantages together geographically and, most importantly, economically.

Positioned for Growth

Middletown is partnering with Cincinnati and Dayton economic development groups to bring our considerable resources together to expand economic opportunities for the region.

The population of the Cincinnati-Middletown Metropolitan Statistical Area is 2,130,151—ranking 27th in the nation. Middletown’s population is 48,962.

Within approximately one hour, the region offers easy access to two international airports with more daily operations than many larger metropolitan areas.

Southwest Ohio has access to as many or more resources than many larger U.S. cities, and with a significantly lower cost of living.

Close working partnerships between government, economic development groups, educational entities and private businesses nurture business achievement. It’s a fundamental approach that encourages enterprise, entrepreneurship and excellence.

Fortune 500 companies

With so many Fortune 500 companies in our backyard:

- It’s great for attracting other businesses, both large and small, as well as new talent.
- These companies help create a diverse, stable economy that is well-connected to the world economy.
