EDUCATION PRESENTATION- Sexually Transmitted Infections (continued)

Dr. Jennewine informed the board that according to the most recent data, one in every five people contract a sexually transmitted infection (STI) during any given year. Sixty-eight million people are diagnosed with an STI annually. Half of those diagnosed are aged 15-24 years old. The annual cost of treatment in the United States is estimated at 16 billion dollars.

The most common STI is human papillomavirus (HPV), there are 13 million new cases diagnosed each year, and an estimated 42 million people living with the infection. HPV is a group of over 170 viruses. 90% of people have or have had HPV with it spontaneously resolving in two years or less. 10% of individuals that are infected with HPV develop precancerous lesions or genital warts. Nearly all cervical cancers are due to HPV exposure. There is no treatment available once HPV is contracted, however; vaccines are evolving rapidly, Gardasil 9 can prevent up to 90% of HPV cases if given before an individual becomes sexually active.

Chlamydia is the most common bacterial infection. Antibiotics, specifically Zithromax, can be used to effectively treat and cure chlamydia. If left untreated, chlamydia can cause: infertility, ectopic pregnancy, and pelvic inflammatory disease. Gonorrhea is a bacterial infection that can cause burning while urinating, pelvic inflammatory disease, and infertility. Many of those infected with gonorrhea have no symptoms thereby increasing the rate of the spread of the infection. Long term effects of untreated gonorrhea can include prostate cancer in men and inflamed heart muscles. There has been a resurgence of syphilis in the last five years. There are four stages of the syphilis infection. The first (primary) stage occurs two-four weeks after exposure, a sore (chancre) that is usually painless develops near the site where infection entered the body. This sore typically heals within three-six weeks without treatment and often goes unnoticed. The second stage (secondary) occurs four-ten weeks after exposure and is characterized by a skin rash. Patients may also experience fever, sore throat, weakness, and weight loss among other symptoms. The third stage (latent) involves no symptoms, this stage can last for as little as one year or as long as twenty years. The fourth and final stage (tertiary) typically occurs three-fifteen years after initial infections. During this stage, patients can suffer from neurological problems, tumors, soft tissue non-cancerous growths, heart infections. There is a high rate of mortality in tertiary syphilis.

Ms. Condrey inquired about House Bill 110. Ms. Phillips Carter explained that the bill originally contained language stating that city health departments serving less than 50,000 residents "must" combine with county health districts. The language of the bill has now changed to "may" go through a feasibility study to consider combining with county health districts. The senate has added that the cost of the feasibility study will fall on the state. Ms. Phillips Carter went on to state that if the city health department's city charter contains language stating that the city shall have a health department, this bill will not affect the city health department. CMHD is chartered and will not be affected by House Bill 110.
